Hello everyone! Welcome to Operation: Let’s Play. I hope you are ready to laugh and play with us this week as we head off on our Road Trip USA week here at camp. Today I have a Memory Challenge for you. It’s a fairly simple game but can really be a challenge to remember everything you saw.

Safety Tips:
While playing this game please remember to be respectful of everyone’s ability to play. We all have different strengths and playing this game may not be one of them. We want to value everyone for who they are.

Materials:
- Random items from around the house that will lay down on a table and stay there.
- A blanket that is big enough to cover the table or area that you have set up
- A timer

The Set Up:
To set this game up you will collect all of the items that you want to use and lay them out on a table where each item can clearly be seen. Have the blanket and timer next to the items.

Alternative Materials:
You can use other things to be able to cover all of the items such as a sheet or a box.

Let’s Play!

To play you will have one person who will set out all of the pieces however they want on the table. The person who is going to actively play the game will then come into the room and get to look at the items for a set amount of time. I suggest starting at a minute the first round and then adjusting the time as needed. At the end of the time, the person running the game will place the blanket over the items so that they cannot be seen. The person playing the game will attempt to list out all of the items that they saw.

Alternative Play:

If listing out the items sounds too easy, try this method. At the end of the time have the person playing the game leave the room. The person running the game will then take all items and place them into a basket and set it to the side. The person playing will then need to come back and try to correctly place all of the items back on the table. At the end of the time, the person running the game will place the blanket over the items so that they cannot be seen. The person playing the game will attempt to list out all of the items that they saw.

Challenge:

To continue to make this game more challenging you can keep adding items or start requiring more detail about exactly what items they saw before they were covered.
